Each card has something snake like on it but only described using four simple words.

Each card also has zero to four connectors on it, all connectors say "eat" on them.

To start the game each player draws four cards.

Each turn a player draws a card and reads aloud three of the four words and says how many connectors are on it.

The player then places the card face down with any orientation they want.

Each other player then must take a card from hand and play it face up against one of the sides of the face down card, there is no problem with multiple people choosing the same connector.

The objective is simply to not have a face down snake eat a face up snake, if you do any one with face up snakes being eaten by face down snakes is out of the game.

Discard any cards that are not snakes and place all snakes in another pile, the snakes are shuffled back together if the draw deck should ever run out.

A few cards have special effects as noted on the card themselves.
